RESULTS IN PIG FEEDING. The Picture Shows the Results of an Interesting Trial with Two Lots of Shotes.

The accompanying cut almost tells animals not particularly noted. the story of results secured in a comparatise feeding trial with two lots of shoats. One lot, represented by No. 1, one lot, as shown by No. 2, corn meal and skim milk. Lot No. 1 gained 118 little of the blood of any remote ancespounds and No. 2 309 pounds. The cost

Some Feeding Hints Whose Value Is So Apparent That They Should

Clover and a little corn or other grain make a much cheaper growing ration for pigs and shoats during the grass feeding period than the grass alone. If very cheap. This is a shed-roof buildpigs and shoats are fed with a little grain while running on grass at the age of five windows to let in plenty of sunshine. months they may be made to weigh all the way from 150 to 175 pounds.

On the other hand, where they were compelled to live on grass alone, it will bother them to weigh more than 125 pounds. The increase in weight during the first five months of the young shoat's life can be made at a less cost than any gain that will be made later.

At the same time, to keep the young shoat in good condition from the time he is weaned until the fattening period in no sense interferes with making just as rapid gains during the fattening period, so that one is just ahead the extra gain for a given amount of grain fed in this way that a young shoat will make over an older one.

When it comes to selling the grownup shoats that have been fed with a little corn or other grain while at pasture, they will outsell the quickly fattened

This is because the butcher who has to cut up the carcass has learned that in case of trouble with intestina. the hams, shoulders and other parts of the hog that has been fed well and kept growing are thicker and of better quality than of one that is first allowed to grow the frame and afterwards fatten of the presence of such worms among in a few months.

In the latter case there is too apt to be an excess of internal fat. In the former case there is an intermingling of the fat and lean, especially that of the hams and shoulders, which pelases the ham epicure, thus making the carcass one that will cut up more profitably and give better satisfaction to the consumer.-St. Louis Republic.

SUNSHINE IN THE STABLE.

Light Is Essential to the Welfare of Horses and Other Animals Confined Within Walls.

Sunshine is just as essential to horses and other farm animals as it is to human beings. Do not lose sight of this fact when building stables and pens. This is too often done, and stables for both horses and cattle are too dark. The eyes of horses are not infrequently injured by being kept in At the Oregon exper ment station 3.70 dark stables. Our houses, as a rule, are much better lighted than our stables, yet we all know how uncomfortable it is to go out of a well lighted house into the glare of sunshine, especially if there is snow on the ground. The effect is even worse on horses and cows. Aside from any special effect on the eyes, light and sunshine in stables are of vast importance to the general health and thrift of farm st.c., and the should always be constructed with a view to admitting as much as possible of both. In old barns and stables where the stock quarters are dark, and, as a necessary consequence, damp, it would be a good idea to put in some windows to admit light and suns in into them. The present is a good time to attend to this, and the considerate person will do it.-Thomas W. Lloyd, in N. Y. Tribune Farmer.

BOME FACTS FOR BREEDERS

Why Close Attention Should Be Paid to the Individual Merits of Farm Animals.

The breeder of cattle sooner or later omes to realize the fact that individnal merit must be the chief thing considered in an animal. At first he is inclined to stake everything on pedigree, but after a time he comes to realize that pedigrees are indicative only of certain facts in the past history of the breed, but are not enough to use as a foundation in building up a herd. A remote ancestor of his animals may have been a wonder in his ability to make meat, but it will be seen, after a little figuring, that a very small part indeed of the blood of that animal can be in the animals he If in-breeding is not practiced, the tenth generation after an animal each of his progeny will have in him less than one-thousandth part of the blood of that sire or dam and the rest will be from the blood of

Therefore individual merit must receive a large amount of attention. Some one has said that a pedigree runwas fed on corn meal and water, and ning back 15 generations would contain over 32,000 names, which will show how tor any one animal can have. Pedigrees are of value, but sometimes they are a positive injury to the breeder, who keeps an animal with a pedigree when he would have killed the animal before breeding it if it had no pedigree.

But for all this the buyer of cattle, if they are to be used for breeding purposes, puts great weight on the pedigree, though there may be little in it. There is always a chance that something unusual may come out of it, and the ordinary buyer is ready to take the chance. In many cases pedigrees are profitable only in the sale of an animal, and that only because of the sentiment of the buyer. We believe there is more danger of losing sight of the individuality of an animal than of losing sight of a pedigree. Therefore we say, pay close attention to the individuality of the animal that is to be used for a breeder, and if he does not, in conformation and other qualities, come up to the type desired, fatten him or her for the shambles.-Farmers' Review.

A CHEAP HOUSE FOR HOGS

The Structure Here Described Will Pay for Itself in the Course of a Single Season.

Every farmer who raises a dozen or more hogs through the season should have a suitable place for them to sleep only $1.05. Lot No. 2 cost a total of and eat. A neat and comfortable house $26.87, allowing 20 cents per hundred can be built from native lumber, the cost of which can be made perhaps in one season by the number of pigs saved No. 2 was made of corn meal one part during farrowing time, and by econ-and skimmed milk three parts.—Farm omy of feed. Besides, the will be more healthy in having a clean feeding floor and dry sleeping quarters.

DEL HOGHOUSE

The accompanying plan suggests simple hoghouse, which can be built ing facing south, which has several The height from floor to plate is nine feet in front and six in the rear. The feedroom is 12x12, the sleeping-room 8x12, and the alley four feet wide. Farrowing pens are 6x8 feet each. The dotted lines mark movable partitions. Each pen and room should be well lighted. Small doors in front open into lots. If desired, a feeding crib or grain bin may be built on the end of the house adjacent to the feed room.-Orange Judd Farmer

Changing the Sheep Pasture. The sheep pasture must be sometimes given a rest from sheep on account of the deposit of the eggs of intestinal worms of sheep. In some old pastures these eggs are said to be spread by the millions. This is particularly dangerous ground to be fed over by young lambs. The man that has more than one pasture will find himself in an advantageous position worms arising. He can then simp'y change his sheep run from one pasture to the other. Such a change is n t necessary unless there are signs the sheep.-Farmers' Review.

Mix Brains with Feeling.

It has been a common idea that all the hog was good for was to consume on entrated feeds; but now we find in the hog a new and profitable way seen climbing up an embankment by better if kept on grass and given he was not injured, and he still clung tions have been experimenting with clover and alfalfa hay. Don't think that a hog is only fit to eat corn, and at the same time eat up profit; it is so sometimes, but if managed carefully it will a ldom turn out that way. Mix brains with all your work, if you want more dollars mixed in your profit.-Midland Farmer

The heavy lard hogs take more feed than the younger smaller bacon hogs.
